Introduction

There will have been points in most teachers' careers when we have stopped to wonder "What am I actually doing?". Sometimes, filling our students up with all the requisite grammar and vocabulary, and polishing their pronunciation and honing their communicative skills doesn't actually seem to be helping them to achieve the wider goal of being able to genuinely communicate with and understand the real world outside the classroom at all.

For too long, we have been concentrating on structures and forms and producing materials that may help our students to have perfect diphthongs or a flawless command of the third conditional while leaving out anything approaching real, valid, meaningful content. Major ELT publishers have produced materials so carefully calculated not to offend anyone that they far too often end up being vacuous if not completely meaningless. If our students are to have any hope of using their language skills to genuinely comprehend and communicate in the global village, intercultural awareness is crucial.

What is intercultural learning?

The process of becoming more aware of and better understanding one's own culture and other cultures around the world. The aim of intercultural learning is to increase international and cross-cultural tolerance and understanding. This can take lots of forms - intercultural learning is by no means only a part of EFL, but has exponents in all fields of education.

What do we understand by the word 'culture'?

A way of life. A set of social practices. A system of beliefs. A shared history or set of experiences. A culture may be synonymous with a country, or a region, or a nationality or it may cross several countries or regions. A culture may be synonymous with a religion, though followers of Christianity or Judaism or

Islam may also come from different cultures. It is highly possible to belong to or identify oneself with more than one culture.

Intercultural awareness

Intercultural awareness in language learning is often talked about as though it were a 'fifth skill' - the ability to be aware of cultural relativity following reading, writing, listening and speaking. There is something to be said for this as an initial attempt to understand or define something that may seem a difficult concept but, as Claire Kramsch points out ...

"If...language is seen as social practice, culture becomes the very core of language teaching. Cultural awareness must then be viewed as enabling language proficiency ... Culture in language teaching is not an expendable fifth skill, tacked on, so to speak, to the teaching of speaking, listening, reading and writing" (in Context and Culture in Language Teaching OUP, 1993).

Language itself is defined by a culture. We cannot be competent in the language if we do not also understand the culture that has shaped and informed it. We cannot learn a second language if we do not have an awareness of that culture, and how that culture relates to our own first language/first culture. It is not only therefore essential to have cultural awareness, but also intercultural awareness.

Intercultural communicative competence

Following on from what Kramsch says above, intercultural awareness is not really therefore a skill, but a collection of skills and attitudes better thought of as a competence.

Intercultural communicative competence is an attempt to raise students' awareness of their own culture, and in so doing, help them to interpret and understand other cultures. It is not just a body of knowledge, but a set of practices requiring knowledge, skills and attitudes.

Intercultural awareness skills

What are these attitudes and skills that make up the competence? Among them are:

- observing, identifying and recognising
- comparing and contrasting
- negotiating meaning
- dealing with or tolerating ambiguity
- effectively interpreting messages
- limiting the possibility of misinterpretation
- defending one's own point of view while acknowledging the legitimacy of others
- accepting difference

These are very similar to many of the skills we teach normally. So what makes intercultural learning different?

Raised awareness of what we do and of the vital importance of these skills already makes intercultural communicative competence a more attainable goal. Moreover - and despite the fact that the competence is more than just a body of knowledge - intercultural awareness skills can be developed by designing materials which have cultural and intercultural themes as their content, a kind of loop input, if you like.

How does this affect the role of the teacher?

What are teachers? Activities managers? Language facilitation units? Babysitters? Intercultural learning gives the teacher a role not only as one or more of these, but also as an educator. This makes many teachers feel uncomfortable, above all with the idea that we may be influencing our students in some way. Are we responsible for transmitting some kind of ideology to our students?

No, we are helping them to become more aware of the world around them, and to better interact with that world. These are the crucial roles of the teacher.

Moreover, EFL teachers tend to have a wide variety of different backgrounds in different disciplines. They have different experiences, and in many cases may have travelled extensively and got to know several different cultures. They may have undergone the experience of living in, adjusting to and understanding a different culture. There is a lot that they can bring to the job. They are unique mediators of cultural relativity.

When should we introduce this?

Previously, "cultural awareness" has often only been seen as something for advanced learners, an extension exercise that can be "tacked on" to an ordinary lesson. This is partly due to the all-too frequent error of assuming that students with a low level of English also have a low intellect generally, or that it is impossible to explain intellectual concepts in level one English. Intercultural awareness, as a fundamental feature of language and an integral part of language learning, is important at all levels.

‘Intercultural communication should grow from an understanding of people, culture and society generally.’

"We are training mentors to work with newly arrived migrants. These mentors will work through their mother tongue. We have a Pakistani man who is here in a hostel with his wife and family. He is very keen to integrate and acquire the social and cultural skills necessary to succeed in Irish society. At the same time he told me that his wife had to obey his strict instruction and could only operate in society with his express permission. Thus we have a two tier value set - Pakistani original for within the family and Pakistani adaptive for the males to get on in Irish society. This man sees no contradiction in this. His wife is not allowed to attend the training course though she would be a valuable addition for working with Pakistani women, no doubt."

When I was at school in the Republic of Ireland, I had to learn Gaelic. I was forced to spend 30 per cent of my time not learning something useful like maths or science, that would serve me in life. I was a victim of a nostalgic, misguided and retrograde Irish nationalism that the politicians of the day decided to inflict upon us school kids to make themselves feel better.

INTRODUCTION

These guidelines are based on the process of school self-evaluation used in Scotland and described in the document, "How Good is Our School?"

The aim of these guidelines is to help you to evaluate the quality of your European project and its activities. They introduce Key Areas and Indicators to help you to:

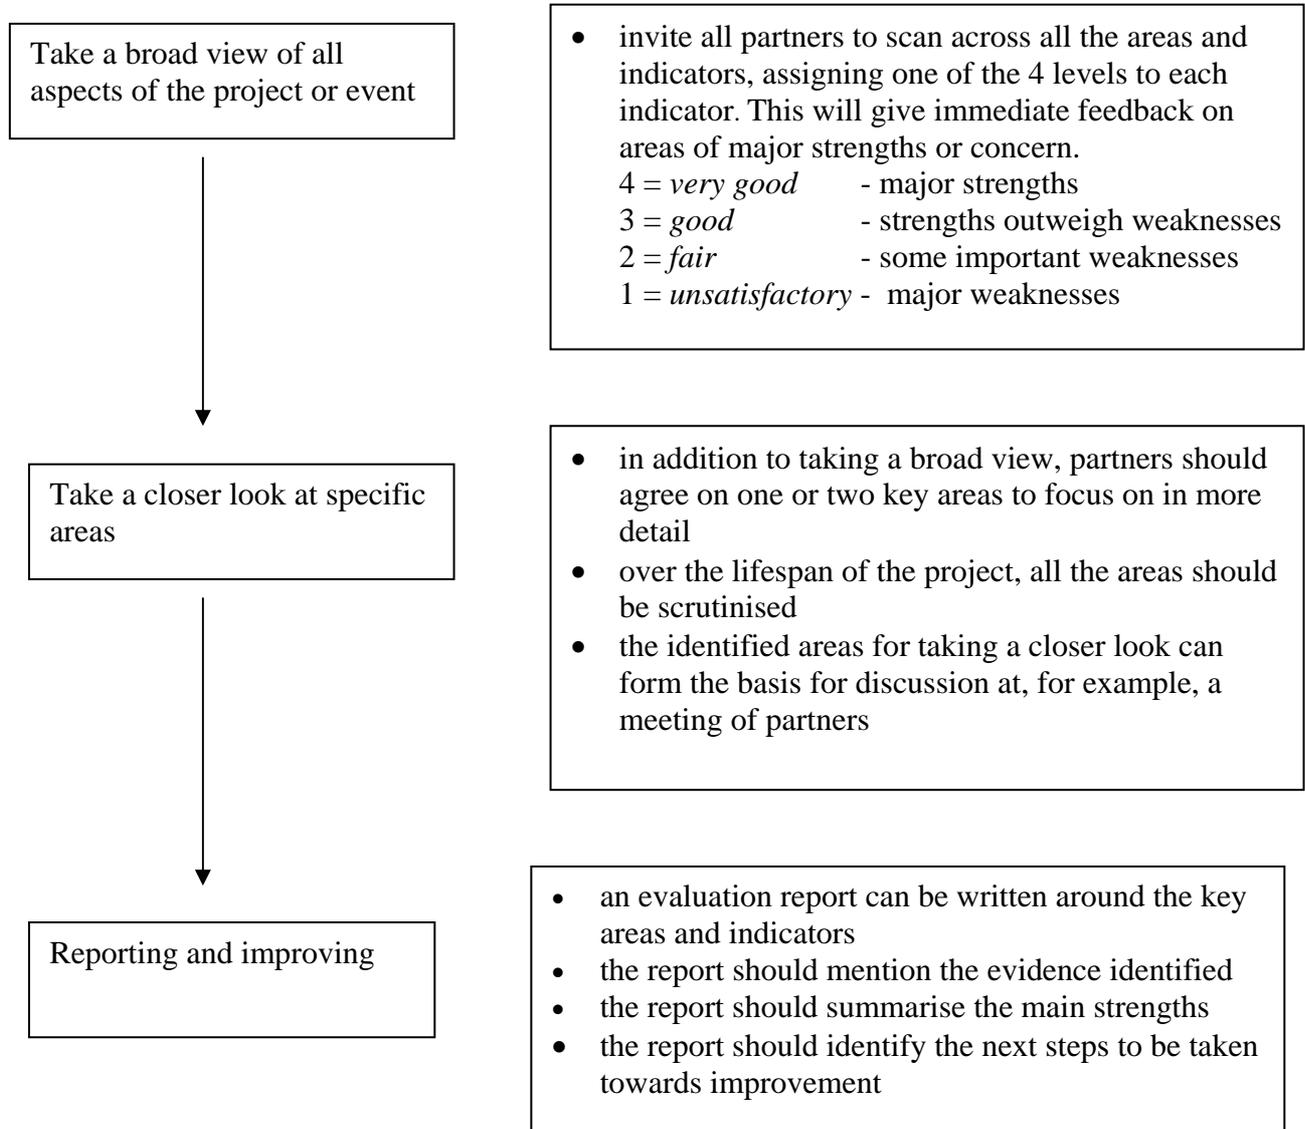

- recognise key strengths
- identify those areas where some improvement or further action is needed
- draw up an action plan for improvement

Three basic questions are at the centre of the self-evaluation process:

USING THE TOOLS

The tools, “How Good is Our Project?” and “How Good is the Event?” allow you to:

The tools are offered as a flexible resource which can be tailored to meet the needs of individual projects and events. They can be downloaded from: <http://www.aberdeen-education.org.uk/european>

	Quality of the trans-national partnership
1.1	Strong commitment to the project by each partner	*extent to which each partner is prepared to commit time and resources as required in line with the jointly agreed work plan *willingness to resolve problems
1.2	Agreement amongst partners	*mutual understanding about project rationale, overall aims and short-term/long-term objectives *clear evidence in the workplan of sharing of roles and responsibilities amongst partners
1.3	Effective and on-going communication amongst partners and with other agencies	*effectiveness of communication with account being taken of any language difficulties *clarity of communication, particularly by the project co-ordinator *range, purpose, fulness and effectiveness of contacts and communications amongst partners and with other agencies eg. National Agency, European Commission
1.4	Trust amongst partners	*development of mutual trust throughout the life of the project *development amongst partners of a sense of ownership of the project
1.5	Development of positive attitudes	*development of positive attitudes towards Europe and transnational activities
	Project management, leadership and quality assurance
2.1	Quality of project management arrangements	*commitment and equitable involvement of all partners *detailed arrangements for implementation of workplans and administration of budgets *clarity of project co-ordination
2.2	Effective management and leadership qualities demonstrated by project co-ordinator	*professional competence and commitment displayed by project co-ordinator *leadership qualities *quality of relationship with partners and development of teamwork
2.3	Effectiveness of the process of monitoring and evaluation	*quality of the proposals for on-going monitoring and evaluation of the project and of its impact at local/regional/national/European level

2.4	Quality of the dissemination process	*quality of the arrangements for disseminating project information/results *multiplier effect
2.5	Implementation of the workplan	*adherence to the workplan by all partners *deviation from the workplan based on well-considered reasons and mutual agreement
2.6	Integration of project activities into the department's/ institution's development plan	*evidence of the project's integration into the development plan and normal activities of the participating institutions
	Project and its content/activities
3.1	Structure of the project	*clear rationale and clarity of objectives *realistic timescales *pertinence of topics and activities *clarity and consistency of the general design of the project
3.2	Quality of the project	*quality of the project in terms of its short, medium and long term impact at local/regional/national/ European level
3.3	Quality of project materials/ products	*quality of materials/guides/reports/products throughout the life-cycle of the project
3.4	Integration of the project activities into and across the curriculum or work area	*integration and permeation *extent and quality of the intercultural/language-awareness dimensions *extent and quality of the multidisciplinary of the project
3.5	Quality of the promotion of the European Dimension	*appropriate emphasis placed on the European dimension in education *effective promotion of knowledge and understanding about Europe
3.6	Innovation and variety of approach	*evidence of a varied range of approaches by all partners within the project *use, where appropriate, of innovative methodology and effective use of new technologies *extent of the opportunity for partners to input their own expertise and learn from each other
	Support for project partners and participants
4.1	Support within each partner organisation	*effective and ongoing support from line management within each partner organisation *access to specialised support as appropriate on an in-house basis *quality of support for individual participants
4.2	Peer support	*effective peer support within each partner organisation *support, where appropriate, from project partners or those involved in similar transnational projects
4.3	Support from external agencies	*awareness of specialised support available from external agencies at local/regional/national/ European level

	Resources
5.1	Provision of project resources	*sufficiency, range and suitability of project resources, including, where appropriate, technology resources *sharing of resources/expertise amongst transnational partners
5.2	Effective use of resources	*extent to which technology and other resources are used effectively and innovatively *clear link between project workplan and cost-effective use of resources

Performance Indicator 1.1

Strong commitment to the project by each partner

This performance indicator is concerned with the following themes:

- * extent to which each partner is prepared to commit time and resources as required in line with the jointly agreed work plan
- * evidence of willingness to resolve problems

It refers to the quality of the transnational partnership in terms of each partner's commitment to ensuring that the transnational project develops according to the agreed work plan for each year, and that any problems are resolved quickly and effectively.

Level 4 Illustration

- * Each partner has a clear understanding of the amount of time and resources which require to be allocated to the project and demonstrates a strong willingness to contribute as required
- * Each partner is fully aware of the need to compromise and demonstrates a clear commitment to resolve any problems which arise in a way which is acceptable to all project partners

A performance broadly equivalent to that illustrated above would merit a Level 4 award.

Level 2 Illustration

- * There is lack of a clear understanding of the amount of time and resources which require to be allocated to the project in order to meet the targets agreed in the work plan, and consequently there may be evidence of a failure to contribute as required
- * Where problems have arisen, there is evidence of a lack of commitment to finding a mutually acceptable compromise

A performance broadly equivalent to that illustrated above would merit a Level 2 award.

Notes:

1. Reference should be made to the agreed workplan for the appropriate year of the project and, where appropriate, to the final report for each year of the project.

HOW GOOD IS THE EVENT?

(A tool for the evaluation/self-evaluation of transnational courses/conferences/seminars)

This tool has been produced in line with the Scottish model of evaluation, which uses key areas and performance indicators for evaluation and self-evaluation.

The tool is intended for use by external evaluators, event organisers and participants. It may be used in two main ways:

- to provide a broad overview of the event as a whole (eg. each indicator can be evaluated on a 4 point scale, where 4 is very good)
- to focus on one, or more, key area of particular relevance (in this case, it may be necessary to tease out the indicators in more detail)

The tool is offered as a flexible resource which can be tailored to meet the needs of individual events. It may prove useful as a starting point for initiating discussion, especially where, for example, there is an opportunity for event organisers and participants to use it for their own self-evaluation of an event, and follow this up with a shared discussion based on the results.

HOW GOOD IS THE EVENT?

Key area: Quality of the transnational partnership Performance Indicator 1.1

This performance indicator is concerned with the following themes:

extent to which each partner contributes to the transnational event
evidence of partners sharing roles and responsibilities during the event, or within the overall project

It refers to the quality of the transnational partnership in terms of the contribution of each partner to the event element of the transnational project, with clear evidence of an appropriate division of tasks and responsibilities

Level 4 Illustration

Each partner plays a role in the preparation and delivery of the event according to an agreed prior division of roles and responsibilities
There is clear evidence of a collaborative approach, with strong teamworking

A performance broadly equivalent to that illustrated above would merit a Level 4 award.

Level 2` Illustration

- * There is lack of a clarity in the partners' division of roles and responsibilities, and consequently there may be evidence of a failure to contribute as required
- * Where problems have arisen, there is evidence of a lack of commitment to finding a mutually acceptable compromise

A performance broadly equivalent to that illustrated above would merit a Level 2 award.

Pupils make regular use of email to communicate with partners in their Comenius project, and demonstrate proficiency in the sending of attachments (text, graphics, audio) related to the theme of the project. With support from the education authority, pupils participated in a short video-conference with one of the partner schools, thus using technology to "meet" their peers in the foreign country in preparation for collaboration on the creation of a project website. Pupils are encouraged to make regular use of the World Wide Web to access local and global information for use in their own projects and activities. |

How Good is Our Network?

This tool is offered to help Thematic Networks measure their progress and performance against the two broad criteria for these networks specified by the European Commission in the SOCRATES Guidelines for Applicants 2000-2006:

- A platform to assist the persons and institutions involved in Comenius to strengthen their contribution
- A forum for joint reflection and co-operation in identifying and promoting innovation and best practice in the thematic area

The areas and quality indicators from “How Good is Our Project?” can also, of course, be used by thematic networks to take an overview of their progress. This tool, however, takes a closer look at areas of specific relevance to the networks.

Levels of performance can be assessed according to an agreed scale eg. from 4 (High) to 1 (Low).*

This tool, developed for the RIAC Thematic Network, may be adapted for use in other contexts.

Evaluating the projects within RIAC

The RIAC thematic network is promoting and co-ordinating activities relating to the development of regional identity and active citizenship. As a means of encouraging projects to monitor and evaluate their activities, it is proposed that several tools are produced to tease out the criteria which might be assessed in each thematic area. Below is an example of a planning and evaluation tool for the area of Youth Democracy.

Youth Democracy

Youth participation in the political process is important for developing the skills of active citizenship and allowing young people to contribute at local, national or international level as appropriate. Encouraging and supporting youth participation involves recognising the strengths, interests and abilities of young people to enable them to balance their social rights and responsibilities while working towards community development in a democratic society.

Overleaf is a tool which can be used in two ways:

- as a checklist for planning a project
Simply tick each indicator which should feature in a proposed project
- as an evaluation tool
Assess the strengths and weaknesses of performance against each of the chosen indicators by collecting appropriate evidence, and then define the next steps to be taken

The checklist/evaluation tool covers 4 broad areas:

- Knowledge and understanding
- Skills and competencies
- Values and attitudes
- Creativity and enterprise
